> It furnishes to its customers, free, good advice regarding investments, drafts on various points without charge for any amount wanted. Issues letters of credit and does anything any other bank, either national or private, can do, except that it cans money only on security.
> It furnishes absolute security for those who deal with it, as it puts up a Million holders are liable for another million. It pays interest on deposits, in other words, it divides part of its profits with its depositors, as well as stockholders. It makes no departure in this respect from the soundest financial principles, as interest is paid by such great institutions and bankers as the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Credit Lyonnaise, Messrs. Rothschilds & Co., Messrs, Belmont & Co., Messrs. Drexel & Co. and

If you want to make your money earn something remember that on ordinary deposits this company pays interest and pays your checks on sight. It pays a larger rate for time deposits according to the period for which you leave them. AT THE WHITE HOUSE. The President Has a Busy Time and Se Many Callers.

OME WHO VISITED HIM-COL INGERSOLL AND JOHN W. MACKAY MAKE AN ATTRACTIVE PAIR-COMMISSIONER OWEN TALKS ABOUT HIS BUREAU AND ON MR. WEBER'S APPOINTMENT. The President, brown as a berry from his ex-

osure to the seaside sun, was at his deak this norning and transacted a good portion of the business that has accumulated during his week's stay at Cape May Point. He arrived yesterday afternoon, but there was little or nothing doing around the White House during the remainder of the day. Although Tuesday is the time appointed for cabinet meetings the hour was so late and the body so depleted that it was not called together. Senator Kenna called to let the President feel that the city is not wholly deserted. CALLERS TODAY.

This morning the usual rush toward the presidential ear-the presidential tongue is not doing very much service just now-was begun, and there was no reason for there being any loneliness at the mansion. First came Mr. Moore, assistant secretary of state, who is very active just now in the conduct of certain branches of

State Department business.
On his heels came a distinguished couple. On his beels came a distinguished couple. As Capt. Dinamore at the big front door remarked, they made a first-class pair to draw to. One was Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, who is growing stout as he gets bald, and the other was John W. Mackay, who seems to grow thinner as he becomes richer in the goods of earth. The genial colonel appeared to be in the lead, and he lost little time in evolving himself from a state of waiting—through the medium of Mr. Halford s intercessory care—to a position com-Halford s intercessory care—to a position commanding the entire breadth and depth of the ear. Mr. Mackay followed suit and went in over the same cable as his more portly friend.

INGERSOLL AND MACKAY. They held their places for nearly half an hour, and when they emerged they were as uncommunicative as one of Mr. Mackay's own untranslated cablegrames. Col. Ingersoll shook hands with a STAR reporter and instead of telling him what his errand was he smiled one of those complete, whole-souled, good natured smiles for which he is famous, natured smiles for which he is famous, and said: "There is no news. I have no news. I never have. Tell The Star to keep on twinkling as brightly as it used to in the days of the star route trials and to go on up the ladder. My presence here is not significant. Good-bye." And he went along to join Mr. Mackay, who had gone down to the portico, where he stood meditatively chewing the safe end of a match.

COMMISSIONER OWEN. As they passed out they nodded "howdy" to Hon. Wm. D. Owen, the new commissioner of immigration, who was on his way to tell the President—through Mr. Halford—how much he thinks of the selection of Mr. Weber as a commissionr to Europe to investigate the "why" of immigration in place of the late lamented interviewee from Ohio. Half way upstairs he paused to say to the STAR reporter that he is not yet fully established as the head of the new bureau, but that he hopes to get things well under way by the 1st of July. He is now occupying a place in the ante room to Assist-ant Secretary Nettleton's office for want of more commodious quarters, but a search war-rant has been issued in the department for the

MR. WEBER'S COMPETENCY. Mr. Weber, the commissioner remarked, is having ample experience and discretion as well as uncommonly good sense. His work as superintendent of immigration in New York has fitted him to an unusual degree for looking at the immigration question through a task as has been allotted to him, After an interesting review of Mr. Beecher's career, the orator continued: "Mr. Beecher's was a great orator, but he was able to be the great orator he was because, first of all, he was a great man. Assistant Secretary Nettleton of the treasury in the case of Wm. Knight, yesterday decided that it came within the statute prohibiting the importation of contract labor. Knight, who is a carpenter by trade, arrived by a ferry boat at the port of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., on June 2, and on being questioned, stated that he had previously crossed the river from Canada into Michigan and arranged for employment at his trade with one Malcolm Blue; that he then returned to Canada to get his tools and was now on his way to fulfill his engagement with Blue. The inspector at that port barred him as coming within the law prohibiting immigration of alien contract laborers, and the question was submitted to the Treasury Department.

It was decided that Knight was properly prevented from landing since he did not come as an intending citizen, and had entered into a contract to labor before crossing the boundary line to remain. by a ferry boat at the port of Sault Ste. Marie, STATUE OF HENRY WARD BEECHER. Inveiling Ceremonies in the City Hall Square in Brooklyn.

BROOKLYN, June 24 .- The unveiling of the tatue of Henry Ward Beecher on City Hall westerly end of the city hall steps, directly opposite the statue. Back of this on the city hall steps was a platform filled with the committee in charge of the matter, members of Mr. Beecher's family, the city and county officials, judges of the courts and preminent pub-lic men. A large space on the Court street side of the City Hall Park was reserved for subscribers to the statue fund.

The members of the thirteeuth regiment, of which Mr. Beecher was chaplain, and the vet-erans of the sixty-seventh New York volunteers, in which Mr. Beecher's son, Col. Henry B. Beecher, went to the war, were grouped in he park back of the statue with a hand, and a eft of the stand there were three hundred Sunday school children of Plymouth Church and its missions selected to sing. The greater part of the city hall steps and the Fulton street side of the square was open. The city hall was elaborataly decorated. THE EXERCISES.

The exercises opened with prayer by the Rev. S. B. Halliday, long Mr. Beecher's assistant in Plymouth Church. Dr. Charles H. Hall, chairman of the Beecher memorial committee introduced Mayor Chapin as the presiding officer. Before the speeches the statue was unveiled by a grandchild of Mr. Beecher, Gertrude Roxana Beecher, five years old, daughter of Wm. C. Beecher. The sculptor, J. Q. A. Ward, led her to the statue and placed the lines in her hand. While the unveiling took lines in her hand. While the unveiling took place the Sunday school children sang "Beecher," led by the band.

Dr. Hall made the formal presentation of the statue to the city, and it was accepted by Mayor Chapin, who turned it over to the care of the park department, represented by President George V. Brewer.

PRESIDENT LOW'S ORATION. The band then played the adagio from Beethoven's fifth symphony and Dr. Seth Low, ex-mayor of Brooklyn and president of Columbia College, delivered the oration. He said:
"Brooklyn has poured forth her multitudes oday to unveil the familiar form and feature of Henry Ward Beecher. Every man must have his home in some one place, but the great men of the earth overleap all boundaries and become the fellow-citizens of all men. Men complained some-times that he used it inopportunely, but his own conception of it was poetically ex-pressed in one of his own sayings: 'Every bell which God has hung in my belfry shall ring.'

legislature of the state adjourned, for the first time in its history, in honor of a private citi-zen. The tribute was as unique as the man. It was the spontaneous expression of the popu-lar feeling and the recognition on the part of the community and the state that a great and a good man had gone from among them.

"What, then, shall this statue mean? To those who shall come after us, to whom the name of Henry Ward Beecher will be only an historic name let it signify that the people enshrine in name, let it signify that the people enshrine in their hearts those who are sincerely and truly their hearts those who are sincerely and truly their friends; that courage in a good cause, however it may provoke antagonism, is certain at last to be commended of all men. Let it signify that a man who would be influential with his fellows must enter into living sympathy with them; that this does not mean catering to prejudice nor saying only smooth things, but that it means serving the people, through good report and through evil report, with every power that one has. The sculptor has preserved for us the form and figure of Mr. Beecher in imperishable bronze. It remains for you and me to transmit into life those principles which he demonstrated could make a character so noble." character so noble."

After this "America" was sung and Rabbi

Gustav Gottheil of Temple Emancul, New York, pronounced the benediction.

THE STATUE DESCRIBED. The statue is of bronze of heroic size and stands upon a Quincy granite pedestal, suitably inscribed. It represents Mr. Beecher with his nead bare and his hat in his hand, wearing a head bare and his hat in his hand, wearing a cape overcoat and an ordinary suit of clothing and standing in a firm, erect position. The pose was chosen from a photograph which the family regard as the best ever taken of him. The face is somewhat idealized, but much of the characteristic expression of Mr. Beecher has been preserved. There are three auxiliary figures placed about the pedestal. On the right is the life-size figure of a young woman, representing a victim of African slavery, laying a palm branch at the feet of the man who did so much to secure emancipation. On the other side are two life-size figures of children. One is a boy who has thrown his coat on the lower part of the pedestal and is sitting on it, holding a girl so that she can reach up and lay a wreath of flowers at the feet of Mr. Beecher. Both children are barefooted and simply clad. This was an appropriate day for the unveiling, as it was the anniversary—the seventy-eighth—of Mr. Beecher's birth.
